NO CAR TRACKS IN LONDON.

Street Cars Are Not Needed and There

Are No Surface Ralls in the City. There are no street cars run by the trolley, storage or any other electric system; no cable cars, no horse cars; not a track laid for a surface road in the city proper. Many Americans leave London without ever seeing a street ear of any kind, and yet in the metropolis 1,000 street cars run daily over 120 miles of track, but they are not permitted in crowded thoroughfares; they are confined to the outlying districts.

I have only seen them in the East End. The street cars are "double deckers," and, like the buses, they carry more outside than inside passengers, but the number of passengers is limited. When the car has reached its limit it will take up no more passengers. Every passenger has the right to a seat, and, to use a paradoxical phrase, every Englishman stands up for his right to a Street cars are not needed in the city. Nearly all London streets are in as good condition for driving as our Central park roads. There are 8,000 hansoms, 4,000 four wheelers and 2,000 omnibuses, so that you are not obliged to walk on account of the absence of cars. The four wheeled cabs or "growlers," as they term them, are dilapidated, uncomfortable vehicles, which lack new springs and are dirty both inside and out.

The horses and the drivers are old and superannuated; they have all seen better days in private carriages or hansom cabs. You never take a four wheeler if you are alone, or if the party consists of only two persons. You must engage one if you have a trunk, but if every night until 12 o'clock. There are no such smart horses for public hire anywhere as the London cab horses. They go like the wind if by the course, and they go at a similar gait by the hour if you promise an extra sixpence. - Morris Phillips in New York Home Journal.

The I'm in England. The date of the first manufacture of pins in England is shrouded in uncertainty, but it is authentically recorded that as early as 1464, when money was "tight," extensive clothworkers compelled their laborers to accept, in payment for their work, "pins, girdles and other unprofitable wares instead of money." The march of improvement had begun and kept on steadily until toward the middle of the Sixteenth century pins began to win appreciation so high that statutes were enacted protecting their manufacture, and rigid laws were passed prohibiting the importation of numerous minor articles, including pins, gloves, knives, tailors' shears, seissors and irons. Up to this tain City Drug Store. period female dress was fastened with ribbons, laces, clasps, hooks and eyes and skewers of brass, silver and gold; the latter were in fact pins without heads -Table Talk

Wonders of Dental Surgery.

Years ago, where a few false teeth had to be inserted, the deutist put in a great clumsy plate, partially covering in flavor as a cobweb in texture. tf the roof of the mouth. At present, if there is a support to build on, we make a regular bridge, and cement it in position without any plate at all. In a week the patient forgets that he ever lost a tooth. More than that, teeth are even implanted. Suppose you go to a dentist and say you lost a tooth five or six years ago, but you want a new one implanted. He drills a hole in your jaw and takes a human tooth that has been extracted maybe months or even years previous to correct an irregularity in somebody else's mouth. He scrapes and cleans the other fellow's tooth and plants it in the hole in your jaw, and therein it grows.-Interview in Philadelphia Record.

Grief and White Hair.

The mustaches of Henry III of Navarre are reported to have become partially white in a few hours after hearing of the concession of the edict of Ne mours. The hair of an English banker, owing to reverses in business, became gray in three days, according to The Encyclopedia Metropolitana. According to the same authority, a man about forty years old, who at his marriage had a dark head of hair, "on his return from his wedding trip had his hair turn so completely snow white, even to his eyebrows, that his friends almost doubtand Glassware ed his identity." Quite in contrast is saw at Fords' for a bit a pound. And the case of a gentleman, about thirty years of age, who, losing his wife, had Received!! his black hair change to white in a singie night. — Hyland C, Kirk in New York Times.
